Rajai set to bag 90% votes

VOL. VI NO. 241

ter Muhammad Ali Rajai Sunday raced past former President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's January, 1980 total of 10.7 million votes for president, according to partial presidential election results declared Sunday afternoon. Rajai virtually unopposed in Friday's violence-marred election, has won 11,820,494 votes, or 90 percent of the 13,293,048 ballots counted from 182 Iranian towns and half the voting districts in Tehran. Counting is to continue all day, and final results should not be released until late Monday. Rajai probably will not be sworn in until next Saturday or Sunday.

Depending of the percentage of Iran's 22 million voters who turned out, Rajai seems likely to meet his religious fundamentalist backers' goal of 15 million votes and more than 90 percent of the total ballots cast.

Bani-Sadr received 10.7 million votes and 75.7 percent in January 1980, in a race against nine other candidates of varying ten-

Abbas Shaibani led the three other candidates with about 4 percent of the ballots counted. He and the two others, Ali Akbar Parvaras and Habibollah Asghar-Oladi, called on voters to back Rajai two days before Friday's election.

Some top persons originally planned to run for the seat left vacant last month with Bani-Sadr's ouster, but either withdrew or were elminated after suitability checks by the fundamentalist-dominated parliament,

The wave of violence that has shaken the country since the election campaign began continued Sudnay, as a new death Sunday brought the casualty toll to at least 15 dead and dozens injured since Friday. Seven of the 13 to be killed on election day were revolutionary guards, according to official

In the face of the violence the government continued its crackdown, especially against the Mujahiddin, which the pro-government newspaper Azadegan said has agreed with Bani-Sadr on the creation of a national resistance council and a clandestine radio station.

In another development, the newlyappointed governor of Iran's Guilan Province, Nassrollah Shadnoosh, and his deputy narrowly escaped an assassination attempt Saturday night, Pars news agency said Sun-

Doting press drives Lady Diana to tears

LONDON, July 26 (Agencies) - Lady Diana Spencer burst into tears Saturday and left a polo match at which Prince Charles was to play, apparently overcome by the attention she was receiving four days before her wedding to the future king.

Charles was seen comforting her and later told a photographer for the British news agency Press Association, "The occasion was just a bit too much for her." The incident took place at the annual polo match between the army and the Royal Navy at Tidworth, in Hamoshire, shortly after Lady Diana arrived. "She was weeping and you could see she was upset. I think she was overcome by the press of people," said one woman in the audience. Other audience members said Diana was apparently upset at being continually photographed and stared at as she was seated for the match to begin." "She was red in the face and obviously distressed and looked as if she was crying," a bystander said. After the incident Prince Charles returned to score the winning goal to give the navy a 4-3 victory. Buckingham Palace declined to comment on the incident.

Earlier, Saturday, the royal couple arrived at a royal navy training center in a helicopter flown by the prince, a former navy officer. He inspected a parade of sailors.

Palace officials refused to reveal the whereabouts of 20-year-old Lady Diana but said she was "now feeling perfectly all right" after an apparent attack of pre-wedding nerve Saturday. Witnesses said Diana seemed upset by the amount of media attention given to her as she sat in an open enclosure watching a presentation ceremony. She suddenly stood up and, head bowed, walked to her car where Prince Charles was standing. He put his arm around her and they spoke for a few moments before she was driven off.

Charles is scheduled to play polo Sunday against a Spanish team. Live television coverage is planned and a large crowd is expected. The prince's athletic pursuits, carried on so close to his wedding, have aroused concern that he might injure himself. The concern was heightened by several wellpublicized falls Charles took from horses.

There also was concern Saturday about the health of Charles' grandmother, the Queen Mother Elizabeth. Several British newspapers said she might not attend the wedding because of a fever that forced her to cancel her appointments for three days last week. The Daily Mirror ominously wrote that the queen mother "was said only to be improv-

. But officials at Clarence House, residence of the 80-year queen mother, said they were confident she would be at the wedding and added she had left London for her weekend home at Windsor. "That should be indication enough that she is much better," said one.

British newspapers were also filled Saturday with reports that Nancy Reagan - rep-

Much of Britain plans to give itself over to celebrating the royal wedding this week. A massive fireworks display is planned in London Tuesday night and Charles will light the first in a chain of beacons stretching across the nation. Charles was to dominate British television programs Sunday. One of the three national channels planned a film biography of the prince and its main rival had a film on exploration narrated by Charles.

In London, the dress rehearsal Sunday gave police a chance to try out their wedding-day program, which will be the biggest such operation ever mounted by Scotland Yard. Plainclothes police and those with walkie-talkie mingled with the crowd, while constables followed orders to turn their backs on the procession to watch for any suspicious behavior among the public.

In Fleet Street, news editors watching at their office windows should steel themselves for the frostiest of smiles from the royal coaches when Wednesday's wedding procession trundles into the press enclave. Although the bridegroom may not actually roll up the hood, he could well be wishing he had a more congenial route mapped out from the palace to St. Paul's.

Prince Charles, through an irony of city planning, will be providing one of the best views of his wedding-day spectacular to the very people who turned his quest for a bride into a nightmare. The prince's love life has been an abiding obsession of the Fleet Street national press since as far back as 1951 when a Sunday paper treated the royal toddler to a list possible wives.

He took it all in good humor until last September, the date newshounds caught the scent of Lady Diana Spencer. Over the following weeks, Prince Charles watched with growing anger the reporters besieged her flat and photographers used the absurdest of ploys to get close to her -- some of them even climbing through the window of the kindergarten where she worked.

Royal disdain finally gave way to a series of bitter outbursts as Charles and his family lost their cool, bringing relations between press and palace to their lowest ebb in years.

"A happy new year to you," the prince called to reporters who spent Christmas on the romance trial, "and a particularly nasty one to your editors." Equally upset, Lady Diana's mother wrote to ask The Times: "Do the editors of Fleet Street consider it necessary or fair to harass my daughter daily, from dawn until well after dusk?"

In Oklahoma City, oil millionaire Wyman E. Fraley who may not have been invited to the royal wedding, has sent Prince Charles

Phalangists sever ties with Israel BEIRUT, July 26 (R) — Arab League mediators trying to rebuild accord in the war-shattered Lebanon Sunday achieved a significant step forward by securing from the main rightist militia an agreement not to seek help from Israel. Military links between the right-wing

Phalangist Party and the Israelis had been portrayed by Syria as a root cause of the fighting between them and the Christian militia which erupted at the beginning of

A special league subcommittee announced at the end of a two-day meeting that Phalangist paramilitary commander Bashir Gemayel had undertaken in a letter written to the Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, not to have any dealings with Israel. Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam said this cleared the way for moves to re-establish entente throughout the country after six years of bloodshed and civil strife. He told reporters at the Baabada Presidential Palace that practical steps would be taken starting next week as part of what he called the "accord process."

Officials said that steps would include government contacts with the different factions of left and right. The announcement of the letter, written by Gemayel, coincided with the publication in the right-wing French language newspaper Le Reveil of what it said was the Lebanese government working paper being discussed by the committee.

The committee managed in earlier meetings to mediate an end to a 90-day Syrian siege of east Lebanon's city of Zahle and promised continued efforts to ease the Syrian-Christian confrontation in Beirut's mid-city dividing line.

There was no immediate confirmation of the authenticity of the document but it indicated that the Palestinians in south Lebanon would also have to make concessions.

The role of the all-Syrian Arab Deterrant Force, regarded as an army of occupation by the Phalangists, would also be reduced.

The committee, composed of foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Syria, Lebanon and Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi and President Sarkis, held two sessions late Saturday night and another

Sunday morning. They agreed to meet again in Lebanon on Sept. 3-4. Le Reveil published the full text of what it said was the document which included a one-year timetable for extending government authority over large areas of the country now controlled by different militia factions. Government troops would be deployed in place of Palestinians in key positions in south Lebanon and the Palestinians have to reassemble their arms in prescribed camps. The Palestinians should also exclude any Lebanese from their commando organizations the purported document stated.

It emphasized the commitment of Lebanon to the Palestinian cause and called for the re-establishment of government control over all Lebanese territory, including the southern strip now held by Israeli-backed right-wing Lebanese militiamen under the command of Maj. Saad Haddad.

The document said relations with Syria should be strengthened, taking into account special relationship between the two Arab neighbors."

Meanwhile, Israeli planes flew low over Sidon and southern Lebanon Sunday drawing anti-aircraft fire from Palestinian posi-

Soon after the planes were sighted, Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan called for a prompt Arab summit "to study the situation in Lebanon following the Israeli aggressions." Wazzan said that the request had been forwarded to the League secretariat.

Also Saad Haddad said Sunday his forces will reply to fire if Palestinian forces "continue to break Friday's ceasefire" by shelling his enclave. Appearing tired and strained. according to a correspondent, Maj. Haddad vehemently criticized the ceasefire,

UAE to set up gas reservoirs

Gulf Bureau

ABU DHABI, July 26 - An agreement was signed here Sunday for the construction of seven liquefied gas reservoirs in Das Island of the United Arab Emirates.

The agreement was signed, on behalf of the United Arab Emirates, by Oil Minister Sheikh Mana Said Oteiba and the chairman of the board of directors of SBI, a British company.

Under the agreement, three of the seven reservoirs will be constructed with a capacity when drilling on it is completed, he said. He of 80,000 cu, meters, while the other four will be of 50,000 cu. meters capacity. The whole project will cost 450 million UAE Dirhams.

The construction of these reservoirs is part of a plan to fully develop the industry and to withdraw from operation the two old reservoirs which are not fully equipped with safety and security measures, as a result of which the company has been facing hardships in its export activities. These reservoirs were built in 1978 with the completion of the liquefied gas factory there. This factory treats mostly those gases which are produced from the underwater fields in the administration of Abu Dhabi. It has a productive capacity of nearly 2,000 million tons of liquefied gas annually,

The Abu Dhabi National Oil Company (ADNOC) has signed a contract with the the former will sell all its product to the latter for a period of 20 years.

Meanwhile, an official spokesman of ADNOC told Arab Vews that the new reservoirs will correspond to modern specifications of safety and security.

JEDDAH, July 26 - The Arab Cement Company Ltd. and the West German company Kloeks Homelth Saturday evening signed a SR900 million contract to set up a new cement plant in Rabegh with a daily productive capacity of 4,000 tons.

The contract was signed by Sheikh Abdul Aziz Abdullah Al-Soliman, ACC board chairman, and M. Kohl, on behalf of the German firm.

The cement industry is one of the longest established manufacturing sectors in Saudi 'Arabia. In 1980, the four operating cement companies - Yamama, Arabian, Saudi and Qasim Cement Companies — produced a record three million tons, according to the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency's 1980 annual report. Two other plants are in the final stages of completion and soon will begin commercial production, the report added. The largest of these projects, the Saudi-Bahraini Cement Company, has an author-

When the current projects currently underway are onstream, the industry is projected to have a capacity of about 8.4 million tons per year, according to SAMA estimates. The Saudi-Bahraini Cement Company is expected to export 300,000 tons per year to Bahrain, and planning for the Saudi-Kuwaiti plant is based on proposed exports of 2.3 million tons of clinker cement to Kuwait.

As a result of the strong cement supply showing in the Kingdom, earlier in January the Commerce Ministry dissolved Riyadh's Cement Distribution Committee because the cement crisis was considered over and supply

UAE sets blood donation record

ABLI DHABI, July 26 (WAM) - A new record in blood donation in Arab countries was recently registered by the Blood Bank in Abu Dhabi, Al Fajr's newspaper reported Sunday. In the eight-hour period since the call for blood donation, the bank collected 400 units of blood.

According to the bank's manager, Adel Halwani, it could have collected 2,000 units of blood as crowds of people had turned up. "But we stopped accepting any additional quantity lest the blood be spoilt before its

Meanwhile, the PLO office in the UAE has thanked the health minister and workers of the blood bank and its branches in Dubai and Sharjah, Al -Khaleej Arabic daily reported. The society generally calls the nurse the angel of mercy', and I believe this is so. There is no profession as humane as nursing, but still it is "frowned upon" by the society in our country. In fact, no one knows the justifications or considerations on which the society bases its apathy toward this profession, except some accusations which, I believe, are unfair and should not be labelled on a nurse.

The nurse certainly is the "angel of peace" who attends to the patient's comfort until he or she is cured or takes the last breath. Even the patient's relatives cannot show that endurance which the nurse exhibits in her care for the patient. Despite this, we call the nurse with strange names, ignoring the fact that every human being has his own caprices and follies. The nurse is a human being; she may and may not commit a mistake.

Owing to a short-sightedness toward the nursing profession, there has been little response toward the nursing schools, so much so that the nursing school in Jeddah does not have a single student on its roll for the next academic session. It is an irony of fate that, immediately after assuming a nursing job, the nursing graduate either resigns or requests for transfer to an administrative job. The reason why she does so lies behind the indifference of her relatives, husband and even the common people, who have not yet become accustomed to see a nurse of their own folk working in the country. And, if they do see one, they deprive her of all the qualities of expatriate nurses. As a matter of fact, they are supposed to encourage and patronize a native nurse, so that she serves the people and her country with her head high, without having to feel compelled to "close her file" and stay indoors.

We ought to feel duty-bound to encourage Saudi Arabian young women so they can unhesitatingly join the profession of medicine or nursing. We must provide them incentives and privileges and try our best to overcome 'I hardships that impede the realization of this aim. We must begin with the elimination of the unpleasant picture that the common people have created in their minds about nurses and doctors.

Hospitals and schools are the most significant thing in the life of a society. We have already made good strides toward the realization of self-sufficiency in the matter of male and female teachers. We have to achieve a similar success in the fields of medicine and nursing too. But this will be possible only when we intensify our efforts in this direction.

Mixed reaction to truce

Reagan reversed attack on Israel

U.S. President Ronald Reagan personally ordered a reversal of what was a harsh, concerted and mounting campaign by top administration officials to condemn Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin, according to a knowledgeable administration official.

"Everybody was mad as hell at Begin except one man," said the official who watched the byplay from a ringside seat. "He was the man who counted." Anger with Begin followed Israeli attacks on Lebanon in a heavily civilian neighborhood. U.S. officials were quick to denounce Begin first off the record, then publicly.

But by week's end, largely through Reagan's intercession, the U.S. had shifted from Begin's hard-line strategy to ending hostilities in southern Lebanon, a change in direction smoothed by U.S. mediator Philip Habib's success in achieving a cease-fire.

The only presidential adviser said to be "in sympathy" with Reagan all along was secretary of State Alexander M. Haig. He held his fire while lower-level officials accused Begin of trying to split the United States from its moderate Arab friends and, as one put it, "rubbing our noses in it" by launching the Beirut attack shortly before the administration was to resume jet shipments to Israel,

"Reagan has a very special affection for Israel," said the official who watched the turnabout. "It came out during the campaign and it was and is genuine. You have to look at the president as someone who sees Israel as an oasis of democracy in the area, and a loyal

Besides the official doubts the strategy of trying to moderate Begin's policies could succeed since his domestic critics probably would rally behind their leader if he was under concentrated U.S. attack. The official did not want to be identified by name.

When the official attacks on Begin went public Wednesday, it seemed to reflect a solid administration line. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger unloaded on Begin in a nationally-televised interview. Deputy Secretary of State William Clark, a longtime Reagan confidant also spoke out at just about the same time during a breakfast meeting with reporters.

Weinberger said envoy Habib was on the verge of a breakthrough in his Mideast

Th: 403146 IDCJED SJ.

Clark was assumed to be reflecting Reagan's views when he declared "our commitments are not to Begin but to the nation he represents" - thereby drawing a line between the prime minister and the Israelis.

Reagan gave the first signal of his disapproval of his subordinates taking a stand when he spoke to reporters Wednesday afternoon on his return from a horse ride. He alleged that, the Israelis were under PLO fire. "They are subject to repeat rocket attacks of civilian quarters themselves," he said. "We want to end the violence on both sides."

The strategy then was to stress that Weinberger and Clark have expressed what another official described later as "their personal assessment' of Begin, not the administration's. "We all talked about how we might handle it," said the official, who insisted on anonymity. "We wanted to make it clear those were their personal views and that there was no disagreement on our wanting a cessation of hostilities."

Meanwhile, the reaction in the Gulf states to the cessation of hostilities between Israeli and Arab-Palestinian forces is a mixture of satisfaction and skepticism, observers found Saturday.

The satisfaction concerns the fact that "the Zionist enemy" has been led to stop its hostile activities, the skepticism the precariousness of the ceasefire that has been obtained. While officials have cautiously refrained from any public comment, much has been said about the issue in the press and privately.

Among clues as to how Arab pressure may have operated, observers said, were a number of increasingly open threats of recourse to the oil weapon formulated even before the Arab Defense Council convened, notably from Sheikh Zayed Ben Sultan Al Nahyan, president of the United Arab emirates. He had already played the decisive role in clamping down the oil embargo on the U.S. and Holland in 1973.

In Damascus, a political commentator suggested on Syrian radio that in the wake of the latest developments, "the relations of certain Arab parties with the U.S. have been reinforced" — a development he deplored since there was "no American policy in the area, only a Zionist policy executed by the U.S."

A new theme struck in Gulf state comment on the ceasefire was the idea that it marks a de facto recognition of the PLO by the Israelis, even though both sides have repeatedly stressed that there was no direct agreement between them.

In Moscow, Pravda Sunday expressed sckepticism about Israel's determination to respect the ceasefire. Quoting Israeli generals as saying Israel was ready "to intervene in Lebanon at any time to continue the operations," the Soviet party paper said the ceasefire had not changed the heart of the problem. Israel, which was conducting a veritable genocide in Lebanon, intended to "cause the maximum victims" to stop the normalization process there, Pravda said.

Soviet official holds talks with Jordan leaders

AMMAN, July 26 (R) - A senior Soviet official began talks Saturday on his country's relations with Jordan and on international questions of common interest, including the Middle East.

Oleg Grinevskiy, chief of Near Eastern countries affairs at the foreign ministry, arrived Friday night on a four-day visit and called on King Hussein Saturday before seeing Foreign Minister Marwan Qassem. The official Jordan news agency, Petra, said Qassem and the Soviet official discussed the latest developments in the area and what it said were Israel's aggressions against Leba-Qassem told Grinevskiy that no just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East could be achieved unless Israel withdrew from all occupied Arab territories, including East Jerusalem, and recognized Palestinian legitimate rights, including selfdetermination, Petra said. Jordan welcomed a call by Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev for an international conference on the Middle East, in which all parties to the Middle East conflict took part, Petra added.

AMMAN, (R) - Jordan's health ministry has said that 15 new cases of cholera have been reported during the past 24 hours. It brings the total number of attacks since the outbreak of the disease to over 700. Four deaths have been reported so far. About half of the cases have been treated in hospitals and the patients discharged.

CAIRO, (AFP) - The Iranian Boeing-707 whose pilot flew here last Friday, asking for political asylum, returned to Tehran Saturday night, the daily Al Ahram reported Sunday. The four crew members apart from the captain left with it, while Air Force Maj. Dariosh Khirkhwa, who made the asylum request, stayed in Cairo. He was supposed to have been refuelling two Iranian F-14 fighter planes over Iranian territory.

TEHRAN, (R) - On the verdict of the Islamic revolutionary courts in Kerman, south east of Iran, Sari and Babol, in Mazandaran province, eight persons were executed Sunday morning. All convicts were found guilty by the courts on charges of armed revolt against the Islamic Republic of Iran.

PANAMA, (AP) - Egyptian Foreign Minister Boutros Ghali arrived Saturday for four days of talks with government officials about Egypt's interest in a second canal across Panama and possible Panamanian participation in a Mideast peace force. Ghali, who is touring Latin America, is due to meet here with President Aristides Royo and other officials, and to visit the Panama Canal. He was received by Foreign Minister Jorge Illueca after arriving on a commercial flight from Bogota, Colombia.

U.S., Egypt urged to take joint stand against Israel

Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiri expressed hopes Saturday that President Anwar Sadat and U.S. President Reagan would stand together in persuading Israel to refrain from hostile activities in the Middle East.

"Sadat should insist during his talks with Reagan as full partner to the peace negotiations in the Middle East that Israel must stop its activities in the area," Numeiri told a press conference. "Sadat and Reagan should stand together against the Israeli activities," he added. Numeiri said Israel would undoubtedly adhere to the American pressure.

He said Israel did not give Egypt any chance to achieve peace in the Middle East through its "hostile activities." Numeiri

Morocco seizes Spanish boats

MADRID, July 26 (AFP) - Three Spanish fishing hoats were seized Saturday by Moroccan patrol boats off the coast of Casablanca, a spokesman for the boats' owners said in Malaga, where they are based. Spanish fishing boats have previously been seized by Morocco because of Spain's equivocal artitude to Morocco's war against Polisario nationalist fighters in Western Sahara, a former Spanish colony.

NEW DELHI, July 26 (AFP) - India has not granted citizenship to any of the 54 Pakistani nationals released from its jails in exchange for the hostages of a Pakistan International Airlines Boeing hijacked to Kabul last March.

month as "crucial not only to peace in the Middle East but also to world peace."

He said the Soviet Union provides Libya with arms and support to carry out sabotage attempts against several African countries. Numeiri said he laid down "certain defensive plans" with Sadat to counteract the joint Libyan-Soviet plots but declined to "disclose them. He also called for a unanimous world boycott of Libya.

"The entire world must severe all relations with Libya and even resort to military action if Muammar Qaddafi continued his present terrorist activities in Africa." Numeiri said. The Sudanese leader, who held three rounds of talks with Sadat, reiterated his call for an Arab summit to reconcile inter-Arab differences. He made the call last May during Sadat's visit to Sudan and said it was not in the interests of either Egypt or the Arab countries to escalate their differences. Numeiri said he would send envoys, messages and make personal trips to various Arab countries to arrange for the summit.

Asked about the truth of Libvan claims on the presence of some 90,000 Egyptian soldiers in Sudan, Numeiri said: "It is not strange that I can have all the Egyptians in Sudan. It is a very natural thing. The two peoples are two brothers living in one big house." Sudan and Egypt have a joint defeuse pact since 1976 which stipulated that any aggression against one country is an aggression against the other.

The pact was concluded following an aborted attempt to overthrow Numeiri who at the time accused Libya of engineering it. Sadat had said Egypt would rush to the support of Sudan militarily if it was threatened.

Sadat is scheduled to go to Washington Aug. 4 for his first meeting with Reagan to discuss dilateral relations as well as how to revive the stalled Palestinian autonomy talks with Israel. Numeiri implied that he expects Sadat's talks with Reagan to result in more U.S. economic and military assistance for Egypt and Sudan as well.

speaker of the Iranian parliament. Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, has accepted official invitations to visit East Germany and Cuba. Radio Tehran reported Sunday.

According to Pars news agency, Rafsanjani saw the East German ambassador to Iran Saturday followed by the Cuban charge d'affaires who invited an Iranian parliamentary delegation to the next meeting of the Interparliamentary Union.

Earlier, Rafsanjani and Yugoslav Ambassador Edvard Kliun at a meeting welcomed the development of relations between their countries since the Islamic revolution in Iran. Rafsanjani attributed this development to the presence of four million Muslims in Yugoslavia and Belgrade's policy of inde-

Meanwhile, Iranian revolutionary guards seized large quantities of arms and ammunition when they raided fire centers of the Marxist-Leninist opposition movement Peykar in Tehran, Radio Tehran reported Sunday, More than 300 firearms, including assault rifles and submachine guns, 1,350 grenades 40,000 rounds of ammunition and ten radio sets were among the haul, the radio said. Also seized were numerous documents, printing material and electric typewriters. The revolutionary guards said July 17 they had arrested 60 Peykar leaders and broken up the movement's main centers of activity.

Tehran radio broadcast a statement issued by the revolution guards HQ which said that, having discovered nearly 20 houses and centers belonging to the pro-American minigroup, Peykar," another "five centers belonging to this warring mini-group" had been discovered, centers which were "important ones." It said that in two of the centers large caches of weapons, including mechineguns, ammunition, band grenades, tear gas, and "other combat equipment" had been found.

It said that in another center many "interdepartmental documents concerning the organization's operations over the past several years, and documents dealing with the organization's congresses and leadership elections" had been found.

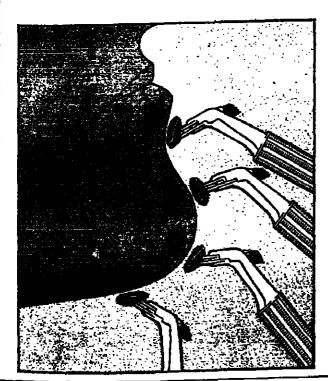

The fourth center was a "supply headquarters" containing printing materials and equipment, and the fifth was "the organization's electronic complex, whose front was that of a refrigerator manufacturing plant." It added that "a number of persons belonging to the terrorist mini-group Peykar were arrested and handed over to the judiciary.'

In another development, a bomb exploded Saturday at the Islamic Republican Party HQ in Gachsaran (oilfield town in southwest Iran), damaging part of the building. There were no fatalities.

In case of new evidence

Reagan may review A director issue

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP) — Presient Ronald Reagan believes CIA Director Villiam J. Casey "definitely ought to remain in the job" if his only fault was poor judgment in picking the chief of the agency's clanlestine service, a White House spokesman

However, said presidential spokesman David Gergen, if there are other findings against the embattled CIA director - such as new evidence of wrongdoing in his past finanzial dealings — Reagan would have to review the matter. Reagan's position, relayed by Gergen, puts the president firmly at odds with Sen. Barry Goldwater, chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Goldwater publicly criticized Casey and called for his resignation last week for selecting Max Hugel, a businessman with little experience in the intelligence field, for the highly sensitive job of spymaster. Hugel already had resigned in the wake of charges about his own business dealings.

Casey's business background is being reviewed by the Intelligence Committee in the wake of a judge's finding that he and other directors of a now-defunct company knowingly misled stockholders.

After conferring with the president, Gergen told reporters, "if the Intelligence Committee concludes that the only substantial charge against Mr. Casey involves his judgment in the appointment of Mr. Hugel, the president believes that Bill Casey defi-

BAKAR, Senegal, July 26 (AP) — The new Pan African News agency (PANA) will start operations in 1982, its director-general, Sheikh Ousmane Diallo, told reporters here after a meeting of its inter-governmental council. The exact date is to be set after another meeting of the council in January and a meeting of African information ministers, both in Bakar.

Diallo said Saturday the council had adopted the financial rules of the agency. There will be a general fund in which will be lodged the contributions of the member states, and a separate operating budget, he

"The president believes Bill Casey is a good decent man who has served the country well for a good many years," Gergen said. 'He also believes Mr. Casey is doing a fine job at the CIA. In light of that background, the president is standing firmly behind Mr.

Meanwhile Saturday, a Republican member of the Senate Intelligence Committee said the panel will make "a fairly quick evaluation" of Casey's financial affairs.

"I think we are moving toward a resolution." Sen. Richard Lugar, Republican-Indiana, said in an interview on the Cable News network. Accused of questionable financial practices. Casey is due to provide his rebuttal to the committee on Monday.

Lugar said he was concerned about the impact of the controversy on the CIA but also thought "the justice in the situation" called for consideration of Casey's defense. "People in public life ought not to be carnivorous. simply leaping to make mischief," he said.

The senator said the committee would follow an orderly procedure, but also come up with "a rather quick reading" for Reagan to consider. "It's his decision," Lugar said. 'The Senate cannot remove Casey, it can offer some advice," he said.

French poses problem to U.K. envoys

LONDON, July 26 (AP) - Only half the staff at the British Embassy in Paris speak adequate French, while at the Bonn Embassy nearly two-thirds of British representatives can't speak good German, a parliamentary committee has found.

It is, some in the British press feel, carrying too far the national tradition of raising the voice and speaking in simplified English when dealing with foreigners.

British diplomats, according to a report released by the all-party House of Commons Foreign Affairs Committee, do all right when it comes to more esoteric languages, such as Tamil or Chinese. It's nearer home they fail.

Committee Chairman Sir Anthony Kershaw, a legislator in the ruling Conservative Party, said the Foreign Office had a table of language ability with three categories — "Very Good," "OK" and 'Frankly Rotten."

Kershaw said a committee investigation into language ability among staff in West European embassies — from ambassadors to clerks - showed only 52 percent of those in Paris could use French "adequately or better."

The figure for similar competence in German at Britain's Bonn Embassy was 35 percent. The committee recommended introducing an oral test in one foreign language for all entrants to the foreign service, suggesting final high school year standard. A requirement that foreign service entrants speak one foreign language near perfectly was scrapped in 1946 on grounds it favored the expensively educated upper classes.

"Chinese and the more difficult languages, we are quite satisfied about," Kershaw told a news conference. "But we found it rather odd that the languages of Europe were not so well spoken."

China launches drive against crime

PEKING, July 26 (AP) - The Communist Party has declared that China has made progress in stemming a nationwide crime wave and called for swift and heavy punishment of criminals, including arsonists and robbers.

The central committee's political and legal department said social order has improved in the last two months because ordinary citizens have become crime fighters.

The official Xinhua news agency reported statistics in 18 cities, including Peking and Shanghai, to show that 5,490 criminals were brought to justice by citizens. Civilians offered information on 10,000 other cases.

paign and mass rallies have been held thought China to sentence offenders after their court convictions. The party's legal department called for better education of young people, who represent a majority of criminals. It also called for better management of juvenile reformatories, reform-through-labor farms and detention centers.

The Peking Daily newspaper Saturday reported that the crime rate has fallen in the city. In the last few months, it said, 19,700 persons made confessions or provided useful dues in 33,400 . criminal cases. It said 2,443 murder, rape, arson and theft cases had been

Conservationists hail whaling curbs

BRIGHTON, England, July 26 (AP) -Conservationists attending the whalecatch-quota meeting of the International Whaling Commission (IWC) have claimed a major breakthrough in their struggle to save whales from extinction.

The closing session of the IWC voted to allow 13.524 whales to be hunted commercially next year against 14.523 set for 1981. It voted to ban the killing of sperm whales in all ocean waters during the 1981-1982 deep-sea catch season and in the 1982 coastal season.

But it agreed Saturday to reconsider Japan's case for continuing to catch sperm whales if two special meetings, one of its scientific committee, and a special assembly of the commissioners themselves, meeting next March, find that the sperm stock in the northwest Pacific will allow it.

The IWC also voted to prohibit the use of cold harpoon grenades against minke whales. the smallest of the whale species, beginning from the 1982 deep-sea and 1982-1983 coastal seasons, despite reservations from Japan and Norway.

Earlier this week, the commission voted to take small cetaceans, porpoises and dolphins, under its management. It also approved a resolution calling for an inquiry into the effects of metals in industrial waste poured into the sea on coastal whale stocks.

But the whaling nations blocked two major calls from conservationist countries led by the United States, Britain, France and Australia, for worldwide bans on all whaling activity and two calls, one by France for a halt to deep-sea catching of minke whales, and one from Britain to cease hunting fin, sei and sperm whales in the North Atlantic.

Friends of the Earth, the international conservationist group, in a statement referring to the ban on sperm whales said that by "voting 25 yes, one (Japan) no and three abstentions, IWC nations took one more giant step toward the abolition of all whaling in the oceans of the world."

However, Tom Garretton, director of the National Oceanic and Atmosphere Administration and U.S. commissioner at the IWC, asked what way achieved and how it balanced, replied: "I think it is a fair out-

The Japanese are now bent on producing evidence at the March meeting of scientists that the Northwest Pacific coastal sperm stock will allow them to claim a quota for the 1982 coastal season.

"I think our scientists will work hard and be able to convince the scientific committee that we have a scientifically based case to continue sperm whaling," said Shigeru Hasui, managing director of Nippons Kyodo Hogeipkaisha Ltd., and director of the all-Japan Whaling Association.

Sir Peter Scoot, chairman of the World Wildwide Fund, thought the ban on the use of cold harpoons was in itself a major advance. "I think it will help to save about 10,000 minke whales a year," he said.

The IWC conservationist nations want a smaller explosive harpoon which kills instantly but does not destroy the sea mammal. But Japan and Norway, both whaling minkes, have reservations because they say that the search for an improved barpoon head has not yet produced an effective whaling weapon that could kill instantly

Japan and Norway have the right to ludge an objection against the IWC vote within 90 days they might do so because they fear they will not have the right weapon in time to

Japanese press Iran to slash oil price

NICOSIA, July 26 (AFP) — Japanese oil importers have been putting pressure on Iran to cut its oil prices in line with market trends. the Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) has reported.

MBES said it understood that the Japanese sent a first telex to Iran's National Oil Company (NIOC) a few weeks ago, asking in general terms for a price reduction.

NIOC replied that it would give serious attention to the matters raised by the Japanese, who then sent another telex propsoing a price cut of $4 a barrel. NIOC has not responded.

Last February, Japanese companies signed contracts for a total of some 200 million barrels a day of Iranian crude, and these contracts are to expire between the end of September and the end of December. But some of the companies have reportedly cut back their off-take to below contract levels because of market over-supply, and also saida Japanese buyers are putting pressure on Kuwait to ease prices, MEES said.

In another development, Japanese partpers in the Iran-Japan Petrochemical Company (IJPC) have decided not to provide any more funds for the nearly completed petrochemical complex being built at Bandar Khomeini on Iran's Gulf coast, the MEES has reported quoting reports from Tokyo.

A spokesman for the Iran Chemical Development Company (ICDC) - the Mitsui-led consortium which is the 50-50 partner with Iran's National Petrochemical Company (PPC) in IJPC — said Thursday that a delegation headed by ICDC President Caroku Yamaguchi will visit Tehran next

He will inform Iranian officials that Iran must bear all future costs for the project, the spokesman said, according to the survey.

He added that while the Japanese were prepared to continue selling equipment and to provide technological assistance for the project, they would propose that the present contract be changed to relieve ICDC of any further outlays.

There is now talk of the need for reform or a restructuring of the economy again after the death of former Premier Alexei Kosygin who had suggested decentralization and greater flexibility in economic management.

It is too soon to say that there is a movement favoring such chances, but the 26th congress of the Soviet Communist Party which reviewed failures of the system — itself encouraged reflection. This reconsideration move is occurring against the background of the situation in Poland and problems of reaching food supplies to some regions of the USSR. The upheaval in Poland does not yet threaten the Soviet Union. But no-one rules out the possibility that the Polish crisis clearly triggered by economic difficulties could have repercussions in other Socialist countries, destabilizing their economies and reducing further the supply of consumer goods in the Soviet Union.

Shortages plague most regions of the USSR, but to differing degrees. The evidence is found by reading between the lines of official statements, while press reports are some-

For example, at Kazan — the capital of the republic of Tatars which has one million inhabitants - monthly rations for people comprise 800 grams (1.76 pounds) of meat, 600 grams of sausages and 600 grams of butter. The same conditions apply in neighboring towns, and similar rations have been introduced at Smolensk 400 kms (250 miles) west of Moscow.

Last week radio Moscow confirmed that the Ukraine is suffering from a shortage of meat, while at Tallin, the Cazmt of Estonia, restaurant had to close because it was not able to feed its customers. Even Soviet citizens believe that regulated or disguised rationing is widespread. As a Soviet journalist confided; "When a company decides supply a certain amount of food to its workers, it has a rationing system".

Even in Moscow, which is relatively well supplied, many shops sometimes impose restrictions on the sale of such items as butter. sugar or soap. Senior officials have blamed low productivity, poor distribution, and wasteful stockpiling.

Then in February the president told the party congress that "year after year delivery plans for several consumer items are not fulfilled. Well-informed estimates suggest that between 15 and 20 percent of supplies are lost during transport and stockpiling. But the system, while protecting workers against the sack even when warranted, also encourages laziness, irresponsibility and negligence because average pay is relatively low.

Consequently, a parallel economy has developed on the basis of supply and demand, speculation, the black market, and Brezhnev told the last congress to take "concrete measures to stop speculation in goods in short supply, and to strengthen the fight by state bodies against all such abuses." But the parallel economy continues to flourish despite the risk of extremely severe penalties which the press from time to time reports.

Pilots' 'go slow' hits Spain flights

MADRID, July 26 (AP) - A work-torule slowdown by pilots of the Spanish national airline Iberia delayed domestic and international flights Sunday as the labor dispute went into its second day.

Madrid Airport reported 16 Iberia flights behind time at midday after 53 flights were delayed up to four hours when the slowdown began Saturday. The Spanish Union of Airline pilots (SEPLA) began the slowdown after accusing the state-financed company of not complying with an 11 percent general pay raise given to Iberia employees last Jan. 1.

Riyal deposit rates firm

By J. H. Hammond

JEDDAH, July 26 - With the European markets shut Sunday, local dealers reported very little activity onshore in the Kingdom and offshore in Bahrain. Most dealers had left by mid-day seeing the low levels of transactions. On the whole, rival rates held firm from Saturday's closing levels and some bankers were privately convinced that this was predictable in the face of continuing high dollar interest rates — although the latter eased somewhat by the weekend on the release of the American money supply figures.

Riyal deposit interbank rates continued to show an inverse yield curve with rates much higher at the shorter than at longterm maturities. Normally, one would expect a so called 'positive' yield curve with lenders willing to forego the lease of funds for longer periods of time only if they are compensated at a higher rates than foregoing funds for shorter periods of time. However, it has been pointed out that in the United States, at present, inflation rates are coming down to below 9 percent levels and their long-term expectations are for a further reduction in inflation rates, making investors willing to accept lower returns on long-term maturities. Meanwhile, given high official 'Fed' funds rate and prime lending rates, investors can only be induced to give up their short-term funds only if the rates of return are commensurate with these high prevailing rates.

Another school of thought believes that the short-term investors does not concern himself much with the 'real' rates of return. Funds must be invested while awaiting another use or else the investor is committed to remaining in short-dated funds. In other case it is the last of the money market opportunities available which dictates the investment choice and not the real rates of

Dealers bitterly complain that for the rival the most pronounced effect is the "borrowing" effect, increasing rates jump up or down like a "yo-yo" whenever a sizeable deal has been struck between two parties and the "market" gets to know about it. As such, ther is no denth to the market and market sentiment changes volatilely from one moment to another on whether to borrow long or short. At the present moment, market sentiment is too strong with the short tenors, hoping longterm rates will ease after the Eid holidays and new government disbursements being

Belgium's Ernest Glinne, leader of the socialist group in the parliament, said the group was determined to restore the cut programs and curb agricultural spending. The parliament is keenly aware that finance is the one area in which it has real political muscle as it must give final approval to the budget. It has used it vigoriously in recent years, often provoking legal battles with the member states. The European parliamentarians have more often than not won the day in boosting social and regional spend-

But this year's inevitable fight between parliament and governments is complicated by efforts to overhaul the budget, two-thirds of which goes on subsidies and assistance to the community's farmers.

While the parliament wants a shift from farm spending to balance the 1982 budget, the member states are anxious not to preempt their own negotiations on the subject, which will culminate in a heads of government meeting in London in November.

Significantly, farm spending escaped the ministers' axe at Friday's meeting, although Britain and West Germany made a determined effort at prunding.

The ministers in effect postponed any decision on how much of the budget the common agricultural policy (CAP) will swallow in

Libya to bolster ties with France

BEIRUT, July 26 (AFP) - Libya wants economic cooperation with France's new Socialist government to 'resume and develop, Libyan Deputy Foreign Minister Abo Obeidi was quoted here as saying.

The key to the present better relations, he told the Lebanese weekly An -Nahar Arab Report and Memo, was the end of the freeze on French contracts with Libya, especially arms supply and oil exploration. He said France had made no conditions for resuming diplomatic relations, which included rebuilding the burned down French embassy in Tripoli. There only remained "a few problems," all of which could be resol-

Obeidi said France had indicated that it did not consider the Libyan peace keeping force in Chad as illegal and was simply insisting that the Chad situation should be handled in accordance with the resolution of the recent Organization of African Unity summit in

SAVE IRAN!

When Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, became the first elected head of state in Iranian history he was welcomed inside Iran as the probable savior of a pathetic situation. After months of civil war and chaos the people of post-Shah Iran were eager for some stability, peace and security and Bani-Sadr, popular, elected and progressive, appeared to have been the right man at the right time at the right place.

Unfortunately for Iran and those who liked it and sympathized with the long-suffering people Bani-Sadr proved a bit too independent for the ruling party which is still dominated by the religious leaders, staunchly loyal to national leader, Khomeini. He was thwarted at every step and made to recognize that he was only there as long as the party leadership and Khomeini were pleased with him. As soon as that pleasure was denied, he fell down in a stunning manner. He simply disappeared from the scene afraid for his life.

His successor Muhammd Ali Rajai who had helped engineer his downfall and disgrace is now the elected leader of the republic. But will he fare any better? He is the acknowledged protege of the ruling party and the leaders who had opposed Bani-Sadr for his sake. It would seem at first sight that he may be in a stronger position than Bani-Sadr had been. But this is doubtful.

It was alright as long as he was in the opposition to Bani-Sadr and an ally of the top leadership but to be the elected president of the people of Iran, he might feel that he is entitled to greater freedom of action in as much as he is the legal representative of the vast majority of the population.

The bitter experience with Bani-Sadr might hopefully persuade the party to let Rajai rule freely as long as he does so within the constitutional framework and in conformity with Islamic teachings.

Iran needs a strong stable central government to extricate it from the internal mess and external war it has fallen into. But as long as hundreds of leaders vie for power and continuously weaken the elected president, the country will remain in this state of misery for a long time to come.

Britain's riots shatter notion of stability

By Michael Nally

A battered police van swept down Princess Road. the main thoroughfare in Moss Side. Manchester, as local people aided by emergency services cleared away bricks and broken glass after successive nights of rioting. The van's tear doors were open. Staves and shields carried by black-helmeted officers inside were visible, as was a derisive gesture from one officer to a gang of black and white youths loitering on the pavement.

A white youth said: "They're coming on tougher. Don't worry. We'll be ready for them again one of these nights."

It was a declaration of street war which would have been dismissed as hot air or drink talking until a few weeks ago. But once popular notions about the stability of communities in districts like Moss Side, Toxteth in Liverpool and Brixton in London, which have borne the brunt of the rioting, lie shattered with the glass. The first to go was the notion that everybody but criminals, hooligans and political extremists had some respect, if not affection, for the police. Some of the hundreds of youths who stormed Moss Side police station during the worst rioting in the district belonged to none of those

The youths explained that they were hitting back because they had been hit by the police, often and without just cause. The explanation was convincing because it was offered in genuine anger.

They reviled James Anderton, chief constable of Greater Manchester, who told reporters that most complaints against the police were "myth and rumor."

They were unimpressed by a more conciliatory statement from him: "If in fact young people, for whatever reason, believe that they are being harassed or dealt with by the police unfairly, it is certainly more important that the police should take proper account of that and should take fresh stock of their own attitudes and approaches to young people."

A few youths were preparing to hit back again, and a black youth said: "We can make petrol bombs, can't we? And we'll get worse if we have to. It's not that hard, you know,"

It was another declaration which could not be dismissed. The availability of explosives and weapons, however crude they are, is causing increasing concern. Agitators are accused of distributing fireraising materials and bombs: crossbows and air rifles have been stolen; and not all the small arms on the underground market are destined for the hands of professional criminals or terrorists in Northern Ireland.

Desire for revenge on the police for grievances, real and imagined, is one recognizable motive for the rioting. Deprivation and determination to protest against it are others: need as well as greed was behinf the looting; and no one in Moss Side needs to be told about discrimination, unemployment and bad housing. But what about the hundreds of youths who joined in the rioting without these motives, attacking, destroying and looting? Are they to be classed with the professional criminals?

And if not, what can be done for or about them? The plea from afflicted communities and desperate families is for convincing answers to those questions and sure remedies. None is forthcoming.

Ministers - having sanctioned the use by the police of water cannon, CS gas and rubber bullets blame parents. Margaret Thatcher, the Conservative prime minister, castigates them. William Whitelaw, the home secretary, is considering legislation to penalize those who fail to control their children which will require fine judgment indeed. Conservative politicians blame the education system. They call for stricter discipline, which means more corporal punishment, and tighter curricula, which means less "nonsense" about political and ethnic diversity and civil rights. Labor politicians blame the government. They call for full employment, and more aid for inner city areas and youth employment programs.

Away from Westminster, debate is more profound and wide-ranging. The emphasis is on diagnosis and cure, not containment. Postwar society is condemned for making a virtue of materialism while too many live still in relative poverty, closer to affluence than the poor of the 1920s and 1930s but still unable to enjoy the wares and fripperies dangled before them by advertisers. The glorification of individual achievement at the expense of communal well-being is deplored.

Margaret Simey, a Toxteth councillor and chairman of the Merseyside Police Authority, said: They do these things because their lives are empty of feeling, because no one wants them, because they feel excluded from society." Such sentiment is scored by police recovering from bruising by the bricks, property owners anxiously studying clauses in their insurance policies and families praying that the worst is really over. And it cuts no ice with the

Another black youth said: "It's a fight. We try them, they take us. You're seeing something."

Whatever that something is, it does not merit the Draconian response advocated by some police spokesmen and Conservatives. The fiercest rioting in Britain was never as fierce as some of the rioting in Europe and the United States in recent years.

Ingredients for 'Watts Two' are here

By William Scobie

LOS ANGELES -What of Watts these days? While Brixton in London was durning two weeks ago, now lares the steamy ghetto on Los Angeles' south side where it all began, 16 years ago? In the nation's first great urban riot 34 people died, a thousand were injured and $80 million in property went up in smoke that summer of 1965.

Watts set off America's inner cities like a string of firecrackers. In one year, 164 black ghettos exploded. Burn, baby, burn was the revolutionary battle cry. If nothing else, it opened the flood gates of federal relief. Some $250 million flowed into Watts alone to redevelop, rebuild, renew. Wherever, did it go, you wonder, driving along 103rd Street, "Charcoal Alley", Watts' old front line.

A guide (black) beside me, I headed down 103rd recently past empty lots, pawushops, food stamp queues, bail-bond offices, stores, more empty lots. Gangs of jobless sat on the kerbs in stifling heat, played craps, popped pills, brown-bagged "white port", discussed the latest liquor store holdup. At a traffic light, a sharply-dressed young man approached the car, offering dope.

"Honey, even I don't come down here at night," says assembly woman Maxine Waters, a dynamic black woman who represents the district in the California legislature. "The housing projects are full of guys doped out on PCP - angel dust. Bad stuff.

"We have new buildings, but no jobs. And the public transport! It takes four hours and three buses to get where the work is. Private enterprise never came in to follow up the handouts. Until it does all the charity in the world won't help."

Nationwide, black unemployment stands at 14 percent, twice the rate for whites. In Watts, say urban leaders, it's a desperate 60 percent, and up to 80 percent among teenagers looking for a first job. So there are muggings, robbings, a lot death, too. Young black males under 25 now lead all statistical groups in killing themselves.

"The same old hell-hole, only worse," said my guide. Indeed, compared with the economic and spriritual desolation you meet today, the conditions of 16 years ago seem almost salubrious. Like other black leaders. Maxine Waters believes that all the ingredients for a "Watts Two" are here. The violence, the bitterness of the unemployed, the poisoned relations with police. "It just needs a spark to the fuse." So why, given so many years of worsening conditions, has there been no new out-

Black sociologists say the 1960s were years of high expectations — now no one expects much of anything. Apathy and cynicism have eroded the fighting spirit of the sixties. This is the era of "individual response," of doping oneself to death, of every kid for himself in savage, internecine gang

Watts, like poor black neighborhoods elsewhere, is "imploding", laboring to self-destruct. Its frustration and sense of helplessness are reflected in soaring gang war figures. Police put Southern California's 700 youth gangs at a total strength of more than 50,000, and blame them for a third of the 2,000 murders in LA County last year. Now, with their home turf so thoroughly picked over, the marauders are foraying out from the inner city to prey on LA's wealthy white suburbs.
Such is the legacy of 1965's six-day orgy of arson and looting triggered by a bungled street arrest. Lyndon Johnson's "great society" was shocked and the guilt industry went into top gear. White businessmen paid their first visits to the ghetto, pledging jobs and money. Federal funds built new housing, a health center, the $40 million Luther King Hospital. Some 200 anti-poverty groups sprang up. As a worker in one of them says today: You just stuck your hat out the window and it filled with greenbacks,"

Some said the massive infusion encouraged a welfare mentality" but it wasn't entirely in vain. More blacks went to college, more escaped into the middle classes, into sports, entertainment, even politics. Among the 3,000 black elected officials in the U.S. today is LA mayor Forn Bradley, who may well become governor of California next year.

Americans are watching British reactions to the disturbances of recent weeks with deep fascination. ch of Prime Minister M has set both conservative and liberal political adrenalin flowing. For years, the liberals had the urban riot theory field to themselves: unemployment, oppression, police brutality, black rage... But recently conservatives have been examining Watts anew through their own ideological spectacles and finding fresh explanations.

In these theories Watts, a township of "adequate" single-family homes, was suddenly set by its own criminal minority. There followed, as one study out it, "a collective celebration in the manner of a carnival during which scores of liquor stores were robbed." The unemployed were thirsty, but scarcely hungry in the state with the nation's largest. costliest welfare system.

Two-thirds of the adults arrested in Watts were criminals with records, claims the study, and many of the others were gainfully-employed people on a mere "foray for pillage."

"From Watts to Liverpool." wrote a favorite columnist of President Reagan, George F. Will, recently, "the "cry for help" seems really to be a cry for a free color TV."

That the British should be delving for help into the Kerner Commission report blaming U.S. riots on "white racism" irritates conservatives here. The concerned Briton should be studying Midge Decter's Looting And Liberal Racism, which reveals how the federal welfare industry makes "victims" of its clients and gives looters "permission to riots" by attitudes and policies which "proclaim that race and poverty are sufficient excuses for lawlessness." In short, not the blacks, not the cops, not the white racists, but the liberals are to blame.

This reckless new strain of rhetoric has not gone down well in Watts itself, where black leaders such as Maxine Waters (a liberal Democrat) spend much time trying to reduce the number of blacks shot annually by the police. Although blacks make up 18 percent of LA's population, according to a police commission report no less than 55 percent of all persons shot by LA police between 1974 and 1978 were black, as were 50 percent of all who were killed by police guns.

A large number of victims were later found to be unarmed, but only one indictment has been brought against officers in recent years; a gasoline station owner was shot by three officers who saw him with a shotgun but failed to ask whether he was robbing the station or defending it. The officers were acquitted, the man is now a paraplegic.

"To the cops, every black is a potential killer." says a Watts resident. "The least wrong move can send you to the morgue." Waters complains that police learned nothing from the riots and think "the only way to stop blacks acting worse is to bear them on the head." So Watts has come full circle, from its post-riot hopes of 15 years ago when bureaucrais and black leaders shared a sense of urgency and purpose in a drive to create something like real social justice to today's relapse into a gang-ridden. police-encircled ghetto-of-no-escape. THE LETTER'S EDITOR. ARAB NEWS P.O. BOX 4556 JEDDAH, SAUDI ARABIA

Newspapers Sunday led with the deliberations of the Arab Follow-Up Committee on Lebanon, which began Saturday under the chairmanship of President Elias Sarkis of Lebanon. The committee will discuss an accord on a political and military truce to be followed by other steps, which will be implemented in accordance with a specific program in political and security spheres. In a lead story, Al Jazirah highlighted PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's reaffirmation that the Palestinians will support any positive step to be taken by the committee. Some newspapers gave prominence to Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal's hopes for reaching solution to the Lebanese crisis during the committee's deliberations. In a front-page story, Al Medina quoted Arafat as saying that the Palestinian resistance will remain committed to the ceasefire, but it would not mean that peace has been achieved. In another page one story, the same paper said that Arafat will go to Moscow soon to seek military and political aid from the Soviet Union. Al Nadwa highlighted the PLO leader's statement in which he said that "our aim is a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital, and the ceasefire is linked to a halt to the Israeli onslaughts". Al Nadwa also gave page one coverage to Muhammad Ali Rajai's win in the presiden 'al elections in Iran.

Newspapers played as a front-page story Crown Prince Fahd's message to Arafat on the efforts which have been made to effect a ceasefire on the Lebanese borders with occupied Palestine; Monday's meeting of the Security Council to discuss the Lebanese demands figured prominently on the front page of Okaz while Al Bilad highlighted Kuwail's loan of KD 8 million to Zimbabwe to help in the development of its railroad system.

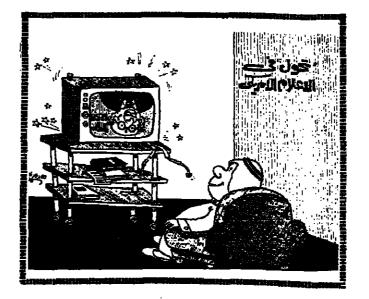

Commenting on Saudi Arabia's role in bringing about a ceasefire in Lebanon, Al Medina observed that the Kingdom's leadership has made concerted efforts in this direction and the Saudi Arabian diplomacy has played a prominent role in minimizing the Lebanese tragedy. The paper said that the Kingdom has persistently pursued a wise and balanced policy with full regard to its Islamic and Arab responsibility. During the recent Israeli attack on the Iraqi nuclear reactor and its fresh onslaughts on the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples, Saudi Arabia threw its full weight in the political battle and exercised its maximum political influence on America. Its diplomatic efforts brought about a ceasefire in Lebanon, the paper said.

Al Jazirah also focussed on the Kingdom's role in containing the Lebanese crisis, saying that Saudi Arabia's support for the legitimate authority in Lebanon and for the Palestinian resistance increased whenever the Israeli enemy escalated its barbaric activities against the peoples of Lebanon and Palestine. Its material and moral support has enabled the Arab nation to foil all enemy attempts to isolate Lebanon from the Arab body and make it succumb to its own wishes. The paper added that the Kingdom has always tried to create an atmosphere of peace and security in Lebanon and it is only because of its concerted efforts that the Arab Follow-Up Committee achieved success in its efforts to bring about a national reconciliation.

Okaz also dealt with the same subject and said that it is necessary for the Lebanese to give a favorable response to the Kingdom's efforts within the framework of the Arab Follow-Up Committee. The paper said that Israel was gripped with hysteria when it came to realize that Lebanon has been put on the right track by making a national reconciliation a tangible reality. It added reassuringly that Saudi Arabia as also all other Arab states will not overlook the material and military assistance being given to Israel by its supporters. But they will first of all use all diplomatic means and, if they don't find their diplomatic efforts showing any fruitful results. they will determine their relations with any country of the world on the basis of its stance on the Arab issues, said the paper.

Commenting on the wave of Israeli attacks, Al Nadwa noted that Israeli onslaughts have surpassed all forms of barbaric activities recorded in history. It urged all Arab powers to hasten to equip the Palestinian resistance forces with sophisticated weapons, especially with anti-aircraft rockets. Any delay in the adoption of this measure would give time for the enemy to continue to hit the Arab targets and drive out the Arabs from their homes. The sooner the resistance forces are equipped with modern weaponry the stronger they will be in their confrontation of the enemy, said the paper.

Tradition, patriotic pomp displayed during wedding

LONDON, (R) - The wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer promises to be the biggest display of traditional and patriotic pomp that Britain has seen for more than a decade. There is unlikely to be dancing in the streets. Britons rarely go in for that sort of thing, and while they are glad that the heir to the throne has at last taken a bride, they seem pleased rather than excited about it.

Recession, unemployment and the Northern Ireland troubles, however, will not damoen the average Briton's relish of a celebration which combines all the traditional ingredients of a great occasion - and more.

There will be red-coated soldiers of the guards regiments, the glittering breastplates and high-stepping horses of the royal household's cavalry units, fireworks in Hyde Park, choirs and orchestras performing "Land Of Hope And Glory" and other patriotic airs. To cap it all, a spectacle to describe to the grandchildren in future years: the future queen, Lady Diana Spencer, riding in the famous glass coach to her wedding at St. Paul's Cathedral.

In three days of festivities leading to the wedding, London is warming up for the event with Punch and Judy shows, military bands and a revival of the old cries with which street vendors once peddled their wares.

On wedding eve, about 500,000 people are expected for Britain's unique "stag night" celebration in Hyde Park. They will hear 500 musicians, mainly from the bands of the guards regiments and the household cavalry, recreate the 1749 first performance of handel's Royal Firework music, which he wrote for King George II, Prince Charles's great- great-great-great- great great And they will watch a gigantic firework show of the sort which London enjoys only on special occasions such as coronations and royal weddings. It will include firework setpieces depicting the regiments and units of which Prince Charles is colonel-in-chief. He is the only heir to the throne to have earned commissions in all three branches of the armed services.

His parents, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, will be there to share the fun. But Lady Diana, like any other demure bridge, will be at home - nearby Clarence House on her groom's stag night.

During the Hyde Park celebrations, Prince Charles will light the first of a nation-wide chain of 101 beacons and bonfires which will take the news of his imminent nuptials to the furthest parts of Britain. Many of those beacons will be on the same site as those which warned Britain in 1588 of the approaching Spanish Armada.

On the morning of July 29, thousands of Britons and foreign visitors will gather outside Buckingham Palace to watch the royal family leave for St. Paul's Cathedral in the most splendid of processions via the Mall. Trafalgar Square, the Strand, Fleet Street and Ludgate Hill.

The queen and her family will travel in horse-drawn carriages, escorted by the household cavalry, past a blaze of 14,000 geraniums round the Queen Victoria Memorial in front of Buckingham Palace.

The Mall will be decorated with pink, mauve and blue petunias, verbena and phlox in hanging baskets: colors chosen to contrast with the red uniforms of the troops lining the procession route.

Along the Strand, the royal groom's emblem as Prince of Wales - golden ostrich plumes - will be emblazoned on 158 red, white and blue banners.

Lady Spencer, departing from Clarence House, will bring up the rear of the procession in the glass coach which has been used for all royal weddings since it was built 70 years ago. The coach has large windows and special interior lighting to give the waiting crowds a clear view of the bride.

They will be waiting for a first glimpse of her wedding dress, designed by the young couturiers David and Elizabeth Emanuel fashion experts predict it will be an extravagant, full-skirted romantic style.

At St. Paul's Cathedral, the baroque masterpiece of Sir Cristopher Wren, the bride, greeted by a fanfare from the state trumpeters, will walk on the arm of her father Earl Spencer up 652 feet of red carpet to be wed before the altar.

Officiating at the ceremony in cope and mitre will be Dr. Robert Runcie, Archbishop of Canterbury and Anglican primate of all England. He is the man who, one day, could officiate at the coronation in Westminister Abbey of King Charles III and Oueen Diana.

For Prince Charles, who plays the cello and loves the opera as much as playing polo of fox-hunting, his wedding day will be a fantasia of musical memories.

He has chosen the music for the ceremony. St. Paul's Cathedral Choir, with its renowned boy singers, will be augmented by the Bach Choir - with which the prince has sung several times - and musicians from the three orchestras of which he is patron, The Royal Opera House Orchestra, The English Chamber Orchestra, and The Philharmonia

Everyone is copying Lady Diana

Dress design is a guarded secret

By Ann McKane

LONDON, (R) - The designers of the dress for Lady Diana Spencer's wedding to Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, sav it will be Britain's best-kept secret of the David and Elizabeth Emanuel, a voung couple who have been designing professionally for only three years, have been commis-sioned to make Lady Diana's dress. Columns of print and hundreds of pictures in newspapers and magazines have been devoted to speculation about the dress, which fashion commentators expect it to be in the extravagant, full-skirted romantic style favored by the couple. It is likely to start a new fashion in wedding dresses, with hundreds of brides striving to recreate the Lady Diana look.

Already hairdressers all over the country have been asked to produce Lady Diana haircuts as girls try to imitate her short fair hair, with its swept back style streaked with

Nineteen-year-old Lady Diana, who is five feet, 10 inches tall, has also started a new fashion for the flat shoes she almost always From the moment she first entered the limelight as Prince Charles's girlfriend, Lady Diana's clothes have brought gasps of admiration, and occasionally, of surprise.

Last September after she had spent a holiday with the royal family in Scotland and became a regular girl friend of Prince Emanuels would usually cost about $0,000

Charles, she was pursued by press photographers to the nursery school where she worked.

Another gasp came soon after the couple became engaged in February when she appeared at her first official function with Prince Charles wearing a stunning black strapless dress. It was the Emanuels who had designed that dress, and the next day Buckingham Palace announced they would be making the wedding dress. They specialize in frilly dresses reminiscent of 19th century ballgowns, with sashes, bows and lace.

David Emanuel said: "we want to keep it romantic through and through. It might not be the normal wedding color." This remark started a further spate of speculation about the dress. One of the Emanuels previous designs was for a wedding dress in pale pink.

They have now shot to the top of the London fashion world. They have more commissions than they can take, have employed agents to deal with the business offers which are pouring in, and have security guards to protect their studio to make sure the design of the dress is kept secret.

They now work behind drawn blinds to prevent photographers and television crews taking pictures from the street below

The only detail which is known is that the dress will be made partly or wholly from stik from Britain's only silk farm, in Sherborne, Southern England. A wedding dress designed to order by the erably more.

It precedent for previous royal weddings is tolowed, there will be several similar dresses made, so that if one style is leaked beforehand, Lady Diana can wear another. One wedding dress firm has said it will have copies of the dress on sale later on the wedding day. July 29. A team comprising a designer, pottern maker, cutter, machinist, and timsher will begin copying the dress as soon as the television cameras have shown it.

Lady Diana comes from a rich and aristocratic background - her tather, Earl Spencer, was formerly a courtier to Queen Elizabeth. But until she became engaged to Prince Charles she was like hundreds of other teenagers - sharing a flat in London with two other girls.

Then she was often seen in jeans and scruity shirts and skirts. But her engagement changed all that and she is now more often photographed in designer suits and evening

Whatever she wears is a matter for comment. Society designer and dressmaker Katrina Young said "everyone is looking to her, and is copying her styles. The royal wedding has created a fashion for a ballgown style of dress, with ruffles, luce and frills. It even seems to have brought an increase in people wanting formal weddings."

At the other end of the fashion scale, the shops are filled with tee-shirts, scarves, and waistcoats showing pictures of the couple.

St. Paul's ceremony will honor, break both royal and religious traditions

By Leonard Downie Jr.

LONDON, (LAT) — The 70-minute ceremony that Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer have helped plan for their July 29 royal wedding in St. Paul's Cathedral will both preserve and break royal and religious tradition while displaying the talents of British composers and musicians.

After music by Edward Elgar, Henry Purcell, Benjamin Britten and Ralph Vaughan Williams, among others, and trumpted marches and fanfares greeting the arrivals of the groom and bride, the service will begin at 11 o'clock in the morning under the dome of St. Paul's with the familiar words: "Dearly beloved, we are gathered here in the sight of God and in the face of this congregation to join together this man and this woman in holy matrimony.`

They come from the three-century-old book of common prayer of the Church of England, rather than the church's new alternative service book, which has caused considerable controversy in the Anglican church with its emasculation of such flowery language in the cause of modernity.

In the traditional wedding service chosen by Charles and Diana, the dean of St. Paul's. the Rev. Alan Webster, will even declare to the congregation of royalty, heads of state and nobility: "Therefore if any man can show any just cause, why they may not lawfully be joined together, let him now speak, or else hereafter for ever hold his peace."

According to the order of service made public by Buckingham Palace, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Rev. Robert Runcie, will then ask the groom, addressed as Charles Philip Arthur George, and the bride, as Diana Frances, if each will love, comfort, honor and keep the other, in sickness and health, forsaking all other, "so long as ye both shall live?"

Also following Anglican tradition, the groom and bride will declare these vows themselves and marry each other, with Charles concluding by saying, "With this ring I thee wed: With my body I thee honor: And all my wordly goods with thee I share: In the name of the father, and of the son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

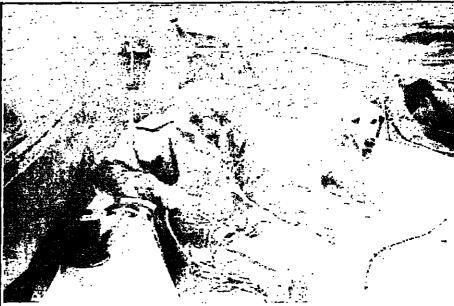

The break with traditon will be made with modern language prayers from the alternative service book read by the present and former archibishop of Canterbury and also by the Catholic Archbishop of Westminster, the moderator of the Church of Scotland and Church of Wales clergyman — a show of ecumenicalism unprecedented for royal weddings here.

A Welsh composer and the organist of St. Paul's Cathedral have composed specially commissioned music for the latter part of the service, which ends with Wlgar's famous "Pomp and Circumstance" and William Walton's majestic "Crown Imperial" march, followed by a final fanfare of trumpets.

The music will be performed by members of the Royal Opera House Orchestra. The English Chamber Orchestra and Inc Philharmonic Orchestra of London, the choir of St. Paul's Cathedral, the Bach Choir of London, the Choir of Her Majesty's Chapels Royal, New Zealand opera soprano Kiri Te Kanawa and the trumpteers of both the Queen's Household Cavalry and the Royal Military School of Music.

Prince Charles personally chose most of the music and the performers. An avid music lover who plays piano and cello, he is patron of all three orchestras chosen. He also is president of and occasional singer with the 200voice Bach Choir, in which his royal cousin, the Duchess of Kent, will be singing at the wedding.

Blind yachtsman sails regularly; voyage to France is planned soon

I.ONDON - Malcolm Cannell, a blind yachtsman here makes his guide dog Andy take the back seat on weekends. The yellow Labrador's working day is usually taken up leading his master, but on every weekend Malcolm sails his 27 foot sloop the Belle Etoile through the waters of the Solent.

Malcolm knows every inch of the way around his boat's deck, cockpit and cabin. He is able to steer the boat from the feel of the wind on his face, hoists sail from the feet of the ropes and needs only a lookout to make passages around his home waters.

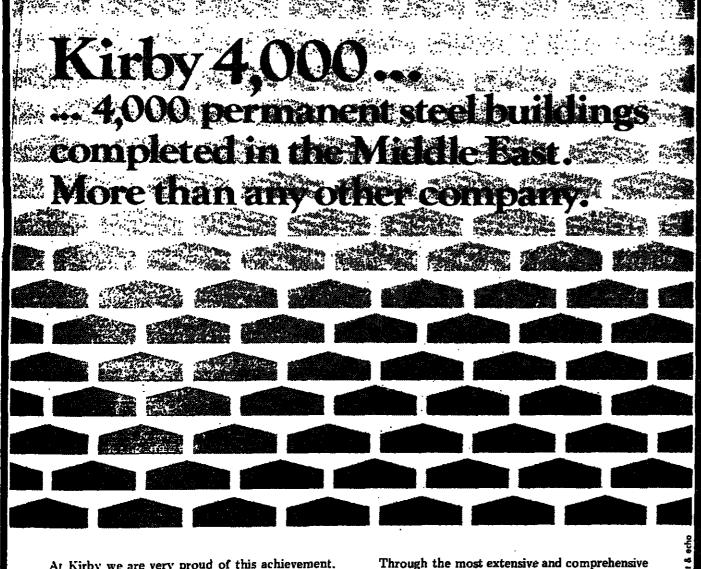

Malcolm travels from his home in Epson each weekend to enjoy his sailing hobby. Next month he will embark on a three-week cruise to France and the Channel Islands.

"i usually sail to places I knew before I became blind five years ago," said the 45vear-old sailor. "Although I miss the sights, especially the spectacular sunrises, there is still a lot to enjoy in sailing."

Malcolm and Andy are a familiar sight to fellow sailors on the Solent. They were also recently key participants in the golden jubilee celebration for the Guide Dogs for the Blind Association at Westminster Abby

During his three-week cruise Malcolm will do his navigation before starting to cruise and he will use a special audio compass which gives a warning signal when he is off course. Andy, aged five, will spend his time relaxing in the cockpit.

Birner continues giant-killing form

nseeded Gomez topples Lendl

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP) -Ecuador's Andres Gomez knocked off topseeded Ivan Lendl and Czechoslovakia's Stanislov Birner surprised 12th-seeded Mel Purcell Saturday to advance to the semifinals of the $200,000 Washington Star International Tennis Championships.

Gomez, whose victory will mark his first appearance in a semifinal round as a singles player in 1981, beat Lendl 2-6, 7-6, 6-4. Birner, who qualified for the tournament field after winning three matches in a qualifying round, came from behind for a 1-6, 6-3, 6-1 victory.

Birner, who earlier admitted he never figured to survive the first round, has now beaten second-seeded Gene Mayer, Terry Moor, No. 14 and Purcell in his quest for the clay-court title.

The 21-year-old Gomez, who is better known for his doubles play, credited his ability to make the big points for his victory. "I hit out on the big points. This is what you have to do to beat him," Gomez said.

Lendl, the world's fourth ranked tennis player, was guilty of numerous errors in the match. "If you think they are unforced," Lendl angrily challenged a reporter, "pick up a racquet and try to hit them back."

Gomez, who lost the first set 6-2 and trailed 4-2 in the second, said he was confident he could come back. "His (Lendl's) game doesn't scare me. I played him before in the French Open and went to five sets." Gomez said. That match, like Saturday's was played on clay, Gomez best surface.

On Saturday, Gomez broke Lendl three times in the final set, the last time with Lendl serving at 4-4. Gomez engineered the victory by combining a drong baseline game with a

It was the third successful title defense for Chandler, who decisioned Jorge Lugan in January and battled to a draw with Eijiro Murata in April.

American athletes keep winning streak

Soviet Sergei Fessenko captured the gold with a record-setting 2:06.34 in the men's 200 meter individual medley, and Alexander Chaev repeated the feat 30 minutes later in the 1,500 freestyle. His time of 15:22,25 smashed the old record of 15:46.94, set by American John Watson in 1977, by more than 20 seconds.

Second place was Soviet Sergei Kalashnikov with a 15:40.62, and the bronze went to Monte Brown of the United States who clocked a 15:47.70.

Carlisle, who finished second in the women's preliminaries for the individual medley, touched the wall for the gold in a razor-close finish that brought the crown to its feet. Her time was 2:20.43, less than a second ahead of Soviet Olga Klevakina, who

After nearly a week of competition at the open-air 23 August pool here, the United States took seven of the 15 gold medals awarded in swimming competition and the Soviet Union won six.

On the track, Cliff Wiley beat teammate Walter McCoy and the effects of an asthma attack to win the 400 meters gold medal. Wiley, a 26-year-old law student at the University of Kansas, held off McCoy down the final straight to win in 45.18 seconds. BUCHAREST, Romania July 26 (AP) -Howard Carter scored 28 points and John Pinone 27 as a fast-moving U.S. team beat the Soviet Union 113-107 in double overtime at the World University Games Basketball Tournament Saturday.

The Americans, down as many as eight points in the first half, overcame early mistakes and streaked to a 10-point lead in the first three minutes of the second period.

Rugby council to decide on Springbok tour today ence. I am appealing to both sides to show

New Zealand government has decided not to call off the Springbok tour at this stage.

The New Zealand Rugby Union Council will, however, meet Monday to consider the future of the South Africans' tour which has been marred by violent clashes between proand anti-tour factions. The council meeting follows a day of discussions between the police, rugby union and senior government ministers.

The meetings came after Saturday's game between the Springboks and Waikato was abandoned when hundreds of anti-tour protestors invaded the ground. Acting Prime Minister Duncan MaCintyre said Sunday the Rugby Union Council must decide whether the tour proceeds.

Together with the ministers of police, justice, and other senior cabinet men, MaCintyre had spent more than two hours in talks with the police commissioner, Bob Walton. "Government policy remains that there is nothing unlawful about playing a game of rugby," said MaCintyre.

I would appeal to the genuine protestors as well as to rugby supporters, to reject violrestraint and exercise commonsense, and to keep within the law," he said.

There are forces working within New Zealand which no longer have any respect for law and order," he added. MaCintyre said the Halt All Racist Tour organization (HART) is no longer in control of the anti-tour move-

It was clear "some groups are going to protests spoiling for a fightl, if my appeal is unsuccessful it is up to the commissioner of police to advise whether he can contain the situation," he said.

Earlier, 200 policemen involved in Saturday's, action at Hamilton had met and criticised Walton's handling of the confrontation at rugby park. The men said the police chief had not done enough to prevent the protestors bursting in t the grounds.

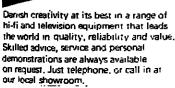

Walton had taken personal control of police at the scene. He told reporters he had handled the situation the way he saw it. "1 must accept the responsibility for what happens," he said but he refused to comment on his meeting with the acting prime minister.

In accident-marred race

BROOKLYN, Michigan, July 26 (AP) Pancho Carter survived an early spin, a 97minute race delay caused by a serious fuel fire and a late charge by Tony Bettenhausen to win the accident-marred Norton Michigan 500 Indy-Car Race Saturday at Michigan International Speedway. Fifteen people were hurt during the race - 14 of them in the fire.

The 15th and-most serious injury was suffered by veteran driver A. J. Foyt, who crashed into a wall and was hospitalized for multiple injuries.

It was the first Indy-car victory for the 31-year-old Carter. His best previous finish since joining the Indy circuit in 1974 was second on five occasions. He averaged 132.34 miles per hour in a race slowed by 13 caution periods.

Bettenhausen was the only driver on the same lap with Carter, finishing just 1.6 sec-

As riot police watch

IRA protest parade ends without trouble

march in support of IRA hunger strikers in Northern Ireland has passed quietly through Dublin, watched by riot-helmeted police in

With a 650-man battalion of armed troops standing by, the estimated 7,000 marchers made no effort to approach the British Embassy, scene of firece clashes between demonstrators and police a week earlier which left more than 200 injured.

Authorities had feared a repetition but police said there was no serious trouble Staurday. Three men from Dublin were arrested for possession of potential weapons and a nailed club, a slingshot with ball bearings and a pointed steel pole were confiscated.

At Britain's Maze Prison near Belfast in the north, two hunger strikers were Sunday "lingering on the verge of death," according to Sinn Fein, political wing of the Irish Republican Army.

Kieran Doherty, 65 days without food, and Kevin Lynch, on hunger strike for 64 days, were in critical condition in the Maze hospital wing. Both men are 25. Doherty was elected a member of the Irish parliament on June 11.

Poles brace for week of protests

WARSAW, July 26 (Agencies) -Authorities here were bracing themselves Sunday for a week of protests over food shortages, proposed ration cuts and price Bus and truck drivers have planned Monday protest parades with their vehicles in Lodz, Poland's second city, where women will stage demonstrations during the week against lack of foodstuffs and other essential items. The shortage of foodstuffs has resulted in street scenes with people racing madly after delivery trucks, fistfights in lines outside shops and storming of stores by hungry crowds.

Hundreds marched through the central Polish town of Kutno Saturday to protest food shortages as Solidarity's national leaders pledged to use all means — "strikes included" — to keep food rations from drop-

About 250 gathered in a driving rain outside Kutno's railway station but the downpour ceased promptly at 5 p.m. when they began walking. Bystanders and persons waiting in the town's "Freedom Square" for a rally swelled their number to about 1,000. The march was the first organized rally to protest food problems since an unexpected price increase spurked strikes last summer and led to formation of Solidarity.

Protesters marched behind signs saying "We Demand Economic Reform, Not Price Increases," and "We Demand Life on the Level of a Civilized Country."

The marchers went past shops with empty shelves, a bakery with a sign that indicated there had been no goods there since July 12, and to the "Freedom Square" where independent union leaders read out a resolution sent to Premier Gen. Cjciech Jaruzelski out-the Maze, was reported to be displaying the same symptoms as Magtin Hurson, who died July 13 in the 45th day of his hunger strike. Sinn Fein said Hurson died after internal

Six hunger strikers, starting with Bobby Sands on May 5, have died in the protest fast by IRA and Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) guerrillas to win prison reforms which the British say amount to prisonerof-war status. Eight men are currently fast-

Mediation attempts by the Pope, the International Red Cross, the Dublin government, the Irish Commission for Justice and Peace and the European Human Rights Commission have failed.

After last week's march by 10,000 protesters. Dublin police put heavy guards along the route Saturday outside Irish government buildings and the British Home Stores Department Store in O 'Connell Street

The parade began at the adjacent General Post Office, emotional symbol of Irish nationalism and center of the 1916 Easter rising against British rule. Ireland was partitioned in 1922, with the British retaining control of the six Protestant-dominated counties in the north.

Marchers chanting "Brits Out" were flanked by several hundred police on the way to Lzinster House, seat of the Irish Republic's government, where they handed in a petition asking Prime Minister Garret Fitzgerald to pressure London for concessions on the Maze

The demonstration ended with a wreathlaying for the six dead hunger strikers. Hundreds of the marchers had walked for three days from Newry, Northern Ireland, and three rural counties of Ireland to take part.

Bernadette McAliskey, Roman Catholic civil rights reformer in the north, former member of the British parliament and leader of the national H-block committee which is coordinating support for the hunger strikers, spoke at a rally before the marchers set off. She appealed for a "dignified and peaceful" demonstration.

"The sons of your countrymen are dying the most painful death you can imagine," Mrs. McAliskey said. "They're not doing itbecause they're stubborn northerners. They're not doing it because they're awkward. They're doing it because it's embryonic of what's happening outside. They're doing it because they need to live with dignity."

The hunger strikers are making five specific demands: to war their own civilian clothes at all times, do no assigned prison work, associate freely with each other in their cell blocks, have more mail and visitors, and have lost good-behavior time restored.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has said it will consider some reforms - applicable to all prisoners in Northern Ireland - but only after the protest ends. And it will not negotiate directly with the hunger strikers or their appointed leader in the cell blocks, Brendan McFarlane.

Minister warns

freed Ugandans
KAMPALA, July 26 (AFP) — The Ugandan government has released 1,425 soldiers of former president Idi Amin who had been detained in Luzira Prison for over two years for suspected involvement in atrocities. Minister for Internal Affairs, John Luwuliza Kirunda said in a speech to the detainees before they were set free Saturday that they were the first of the 3,000 to be released. The government would give them 2,000 shillings

(about $250) each to help them resettle. He warned them against joining the clandestine armed movements currently seeking to overthrow Obote's government. "Anyone caught trying to destabilize the government shall be dealt with," he said. One of the movements launched a rifle and rocket attack on the Luzira Prison in February in an unsuccessful bid to free former soldiers of the Amin regime, which was ousted in April 1979. Some 5,000 ex-Amin soldiers where held in iail at the time. Government officials maintained that the underground group wanted to swell its own ranks by recruiting the former soldiers. Carrying small bundles of blankets and clothing. the 1425 men released Saturday waited for

Brigades' victim condemned to death NAPLES, Italy, July 26 (Agencies) — Alfa-Romeo executive Renzo Sandrucci, for the broadcast of a videotane of Paci's

The Red Brigades, who have recently released two kidnap victims and killed a third, announced Saturday they had "condemned to death" the fourth victim, the brother of a former urban guerrilla who turned state's evidence.

The Red Brigades said Saturday in a leaflet they had condemned to death Roberto Peci, brother of jailed terrorist leader Patrizio Peci, who is helping police track down and caputre his former comrades. Journalists found the leaflet in a waste basket after an anonymous caller told them where to look for it.

Peci, 25, was kidnapped June 10 in San Benedetto Del Tronto, in central Italy on the Adriatic coast. Ciro Cirillo, 60, kidnapped April 27 in Naples, was released Thursday. He is chairman of a regional committee on reconstructin of earthquake zones.

kidnapped June 3, was released Thursday. On July 6, police found the bullet-riddled body of Giuseppee Taliercio, a Montedison executive, at Porto Marghera. He was kidnapped by Red Brigades May 20. He was sixth victims of Red Brigades this year. The threat to kill Peci came just two days after announcing their intention to spare his life as an act of "revolutionary clemency." A communique titled "Death to Peci" and distributed in this southern Italian city said: "The Red Brigades will not have any hesitation in proceeding without delay with the execution of the death sentence for the traitor Roberto Peci."

Saturday's communique was accompanied by photocopies of two letters written by Peci and addressed to Socialist Party leader Bettino Craxi and the head of the state television. They were asked to press

"interrogation" by the Red Brigades. The tape was sent to the Socialist Party and the Radical Party two weeks ago.

Meanwhile, Naples magistrates have issued 56 arrest warrants in connection with the Red Brigades' kidnapped of Ciro Cirillo, police sources said Saturday. The sources said most of the arrest warrants, of which 20 had been carried out, were for suspected Red Brigades supporters while the rest concerned the specific charge of Cirillo's kidnap and the murder of his two-man escort.

They said one of the warrants was for Florence University professor Giovanni Senzani, believed to be a Brigades mastermind and already wanted in connection with the kidnapping of Rome judge Giovanni D'Urso, released unharmed by the Brigades in January.

Issue politicized

Mauroy assures full massacre probe

PARIS, July 26 (AP) - The inquiry into the massacre of six persons in southern France has moved to Paris and into a murky area of French politics. Since Friday morning, Pierre Debizet, 59, secretary-general of the right-wing Civil Action Service (SAC), has been under interrogation by police inquiring into the Marseilles nurders for which SAC members have been charged. SAC headquarters in Paris and Debizer's home have been searched. French newspapers from right to left on Saturday recalled past criminal cases involving SAC members, and the conservative Fig are said it continued to "move on mysterious Premier Peirre Mauroy said Saturday the government "has decided to leave nothing in the dark, whatever the position of men who may find themselves at the end" of the inquiry. Founded by Debizet as a Gaullist electioneering support group in 1958, SAC was used for underground counterterrorist work in the Algerian War.

Though it formally broke with Gaullism in 1969, the 12,000-strong body including many policemen continued active in local rightist politics. It often supplied election meeting guards for conservative politicians. Gaullist or not, through the recent election campaigns. A week ago, a former SAC regional chief of Marseilles, police inspector Jacques Massie, was murdered and four members of his family and a friend disappeared, also believed murdered.

Friday, Jean-Bruno Finochietti was charged with the murder of Massie and three other men with complicity. All were SAC members and one Maria, was Massie's successor as local SAC chief.

Police sources said Debizet met with Massie and Maria in Marseilles May 5 following an unsuccessful attempt on Massie's life April 26. The police case in the murders rests on the alleged confession of Finochietti, a schoolteacher who joined SAC a year ago.

Police said he confessed that "on higher orders" he joined a "commando" which went to Masie's country house to kill him and recover some documents.

Police say Finochietti's fingerprints were found in bloodstains in the house. They quote him as saying he stabbed Massie and his eight-year-old son to death, and that Massie's wife, his wife's parents and afamily friend were also killed, apparently because someone recognized one of the "commandos."

Finochietti was said to have confessed to helping load the bodies on a truck, later found burned out. Despite a widespread search, only Massie's body has been found. been disclosed.

A spokesman for the Gaullist Party - the rally for the Republic (RPR) — said the party "is not involved in this affair." He said the SAC was "a totally independnent organization" and that the party was "astonished at the political exploitations" of an "odious

The newspaper Le Monde said the RPR had for some years considered SAC as "a group with a somewhat troubled past, a somewhat ambiguous hehavior, a somewhat compromising membership" but could not openly disavow it. Le Monde noted the close links between

SAC and the Gaullists between 1958 and 1969, when De Gaulle's successor Georges Pompidou had the movement purged of between 3,000 and 6,000 members with dubious police records. "As the years passed, relations (between SAC and the Gaullists) drifted apart with each criminal or sorbid affair in which a SAC member was involved," Le Monde noted.

Such affairs, said the Socialist Le Matin, included a protection racket preying on industrialists and a plant counterfeiting African currencies. Massie's brother-in-law was a witness in the latter affair in 1978. Newspapers also spoke of crimianls being released from police custody on presentation of a SAC membership card.

spread to new parts of India Sunday authorities estimated that the death toll would be much higher than first predicted. "It is difficult to say how many have died but I will not be surprised if it passes 1.500", on: source here said.

At least 2,000 persons have been listed as missing, and flash floods were Sunday reported to be affecting parts of Jammu and Kashmir state bordering Pakistan. At Akhnoor damage was said to be particularly heavy and the strategic Jammu-Srinagar highway was closed by landslides in several Reports said that a number of villages had been affected. At least three persons were killed and several houses destroyed. But the disruption of communications was delaying details of damage and casualties. In other areas of the country the authorities continued to face difficulty in their relief and rescue operations as reports from remote villages poured into the state capitals of Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh. Assam and Bihar.

In Jaipur, capital of Rajasthan about 210 kms west of here, bulldozers and troops were pressed into service to clear dumps of sand and garbage deposited on roads all over the city by floodwater, Press Trust of India (PTI) news agency said.

In Uttar Pradesh and Assam water levels in some rivers were said to be dropping. In northeastern Assam the mighty Barhma putra and its tributaries had been receding for the last 48 hours, PTI said, and was flowing above danger marks at only two points, in Dibrugarh and Meamatighat.

The first ripped open one of the showrooms, damaging new cars and shattering windows in the area, and the second, in which the men were injured, occurred a block away 20 minutes later. The injured men were taken to hospital. Police cardoned off the areas.

Medicine row hitsSingapore

SINGAPORE, July 26 (AFP) — A conflict between traditional Chinese and modern Western medicine has escalated here with government charges of dangerous malpractices by some Chinese physicians and phone and letter threats purportedly from a Chinese secret society against a Health Ministry official over a ban on a popular Chinese herb.

Health Minister Goh Chok Tong disclosed Saturday night that some Chinese physicians were mixing Western drugs, some of them poisonous, with herbs to fool patients into believing the herbs alone had cured them. Saying that such malpractices were dangerous and could lead to death, Goh warned "Sinsehs" (Chinese physicians) to stick to traditional medicine. If they meddled with Western drugs, which they were not licensed. to dispense, they would face dire consequences, he said.

The minister also revealed that the prime minister's office had instructed police to give full protection to Professor Wong and his family. Wong is chairman of the Health Ministry's Medicines Advisory Committee which upset Chinese physicians by recommending three years ago a ban on the use of the herb drug huang lian (coptis teeta) which has been used for centuries in Chinese traditional medicine.

Defending the ban on the grounds that the drug contains a harmful alkaloid, berberine. which could lead to jaundice in new-born babies and ultimately brain damage and death, Wong recently stirred the anger of Chinese physicians by declaring that some Chinese herbs were no more effective than grass. The English-language Straits Times described this "sweeping" statement as "unfortunate" and "unfair".

Speaking at a hospital staff dinner Saturday the health minister said Wong's telephone number had been changed following the threatening phone calls. He also said that a letter warning Wong that he would "not be spared the knife" and that the ban on huang lian should be lifted before the end of the month, was signed by "the Brothers of Zhong-Yi Tang", believed to be a member of the "Ji-Ji" (or 21) Triad Society.

The minister said it was pointless to agitate against the ban and to make anonymous threats which would be investigated, "Illegal interference in the government's discharge of its duties will not be tolerated," he said.

Goh gave assurances that his ministry did not intend to ban the use of Chinese herbs or reduce the role of Chinese physicians who stuck to their treatment by traditional medicine. "On the contrary the ministry recognizes that Chinese physicians and Chinese medicine play a useful social role," he added. Goh recalled how general death occurred in the early 1970s after people took Chinese medicine containing a high arsenic content which was not mentioned on the label. As a result the import of several brands of Chinese herbal remedies was banned. Goh said that among items containing poison seized from Chinese physicians earlier this year was phenformin, used for the treatment of diabetes, which has been banned in Singapore since 1977 because of toxic effects which can often be fatal.

U.S. expedition leaves

Doctors to test heart at Everest

SAN DIEGO, California, July 26 (AP) --The leader of the first medical expedition to Mount Everest - which scientists hope will aid heart and lung patients - has left for "This is a very ambitious, bold plan," said Dr. John West of the University of California at San Diego School of Medicine before he left Saturday. "It might come off - it might not. No one has tried to do anything like this

West, 52, is to lead a group of scientists to the Everest region for a trek scheduled to begin Aug. 6 and end in October in the oxygen-scarce air near the mountain's 8.848-meter peak.

"What we are primarily interested in is the response of the heart and lungs to very low levels of oxygen in the blood," West said.

"The practical implication is that there are many lung and heart diseases which cause these low oxygen levels. By studying normal subjects under extreme conditions, we can learn more about how the body tolerates reduced oxygen levels." '

Extensive tests will be made at various altitudes on the mountain to measure heart and lung performance, sleep patterns, blood changes and mental states, he said. The medical team's ultimate goal is to measure physical responses at the summit of the mountain. However, West said, "we'll be pleased if anybody gets to the summit."

About 40 Sherpa porters will assist the expedition past the base camp with 3.500 pounds of scientific equipment, which must be moved to the main laboratory camp. Another 12 tons of supplies are waiting in Kathmandu, the capital of Nepal.
